

Below is an email from Ohio Representative Mike Foley, who created a petition at SignOn.org that is getting a lot of attention and may be of interest to people in your area. If you have concerns or feedback about this petition, click here.

Dear Ohio MoveOn member,

In November 2010, John Kasich was elected governor with less than 50% of the vote. In December, he told Ohioans they could either "get on the bus or get run over." Turns out he wasn't kidding.

Today, hundreds of thousands of dedicated public employees, including first responders and teachers, have been run over by Kasich's bus. Hard-working, middle class Ohioans have been stripped of their collective bargaining rights thanks to the passage of Senate Bill 5, just so Kasich can preserve tax cuts for the richest Ohioans.

Public employees aren't the only people Kasich has run over. He and the Republican legislature are trying to make it harder for the poor, minorities, students, and the elderly to vote. His budget undermines public education, makes college more expensive for working and middle class families, and picks the pockets of libraries and local communities.

In Wisconsin, where a radical, anti-union, anti-middle class governor is following Kasich's lead, people have the right to recall dangerous state officials. Unfortunately, Ohioans don't have the right to run Kasich out of office because state law does not permit recall of the governor and other state officials.

The time has come to change the law! That's why Representative Bob Hagan and I introduced legislation to give Ohio the right to recall radical extremists like John Kasich. And to show the widespread support our bill has, I created this petition to be delivered to the Ohio State House, the Ohio State Senate, and Governor John Kasich himself. The petition simply says:

"I support legislation to allow for the recall of state elected officials in the state of Ohio."
